

CS 5500 – The Structure of a Compiler

Fall 2019

Course Description

This course provides the foundation for understanding the theory and practice of compilers, including topics such as context-free grammars, finite state machines, syntax-directed translation, intermediate code generation, local optimization, and storage allocation. It reflects the current state of compilation including recent developments in software engineering, programming languages, and computer architecture.